NEWDELHI: The New Delhi Municipal Council (NDMC) has decided to paint yoga-themed graffiti on walls at prominent locations in areas under its jurisdiction to beautify the city and spread the message of yoga.

“Apart for beautification, this is generating a lot of curiosity among onlookers and buzz for the upcoming yoga day. Many students and children are volunteering along with professional artists and painting material has been provided by free of cost,” Council secretary Chanchal Yadav said.

Yadav was inspecting the pace of painting work being carried out at Uma Shankar Dikshit Park regularly.

Yadav said the project is NDMC’s effort to make yoga a mass movement and is one of the build-up activities for the grand celebrations it plans for the third International Day of Yoga on June 21, 2017. The day will be observed at Central Park in Connaught Place.

“Since yoga has been acclaimed at the international level and practised not only in India but overseas also, the NDMC has decided to spread its message...,” a release said.

As part of the preparations for the June 21 event at Central Park, yoga camps are being organised by the council at Lodhi Garden, Talkatora Garden and Nehru
